ConverDyn Announces Ganpat Mani as President and CEO Jim Graham Retires from Leadership Post after Distinguished Career

ConverDyn and its joint venture partners, General Atomics and Honeywell International Inc., are pleased to announce the appointment of Ganpat Mani as President and Chief Executive Officer of ConverDyn effective April 16, 2009. He will be based in the ConverDyn offices in Denver, Colorado.

Prior to re-joining ConverDyn, Ganpat was with Paladin Energy Ltd, an Australian uranium producer supporting their global strategic initiatives. Other previous positions included Member, Board of Directors of Uranium International Corporation, a junior mining company and Principal of Ganman Consulting LLC, which provided business strategy, market development and outsourcing support for nuclear and non-nuclear companies. Ganpat retired from Honeywell International Inc. in June 2007 after a 35-year-career spanning a variety of functional areas and product lines. His last position was Senior Vice President for marketing and sales at ConverDyn.

The Management Committee of ConverDyn and its employees would like to share their appreciation of Jim Graham and thank him for his 16 years of leadership to ConverDyn and the nuclear power industry. In total, Jim has enjoyed almost 40 years in the mining and energy industries. In addition to leading the ConverDyn team in its quest to become a world-class supplier, Jim has long been a vocal advocate of the benefits of nuclear power. We applaud Jim for his many years of service to ConverDyn, and for his enthusiastic support of the nuclear industry.

Please join us in welcoming Ganpat back to ConverDyn and wishing Jim the best in his future endeavors.
